Insinger Approved as Service-Disabled Veteran-Owned Small Business

Insinger Machine Company (“Insinger”), a leading manufacturer of commercial warewashing equipment for government and commercial foodservice operations, announced its approval and verification by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs (“VA”), the Center for Veterans Enterprise (“CVE”), as a service-disabled Veteran-owned small business.

Insinger will now be eligible to participate in Veterans First Contracting Program opportunities, which provide service-disabled Veteran-owned small businesses special consideration and rights on U.S. Government food-service equipment contracts.

“I am honored to join this prestigious group of innovators,” said Mr. Robert Cantor, CEO, who received a specially designed lapel pin from the VA. “The recognition speaks to Insinger’s on-going commitment to government food-service operations around the world.”

Robert Cantor (above), CEO, Insinger Machine Company and a Vietnam-era disabled veteran, received verification and approval from the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) to list his company as a service-disabled Veteran-owned small business. Insinger is eligible to participate in Veterans First Contracting Program opportunities.

Insinger is the first and only commercial warewashing company to become a member of this elite group, marking a historic moment in the legacy of Veterans’ small business ownership and Insinger’s long-standing relationship with government foodservice operations.

“We are proud of Robert’s service to our country,” said Mr. John Stern, President. “Insinger will continue to serve America through small business ownership and by providing the highest level of warewashing equipment and support to our government customers.”

In its fourth generation of ownership, Cantor, a former U.S. Army officer, purchased Insinger from his father, Leonard Cantor, who also served as an officer in the U.S. Army. Insinger has provided equipment for government food-service for over sixty-years, and received the esteemed Army-Navy E-Award for “excellence” in the late 1940s for its work. Insinger is also the recipient of several design awards for engineering products that saved tax payers over a million dollars in installation and replacement costs.
